-Exploring the Challenges for Global Education Cooperation-

■ Date: November 26, 2013

■ Venue: Convention Hall, Korean Federation of Teachers' Associations (KFTA),
Seoul, Republic of Korea

Invitation

On behalf of the Korean Educational Development Institute (KEDI), it is my great pleasure to welcome you to the Global Education Forum on “Exploring the challenges for global education cooperation”.

The aim of this forum is to broaden the horizon of global education cooperation in Republic of Korea by sharing the knowledge, experiences and the future direction with distinguished scholars and experts. It also seeks to provide profound policy implications and recommendations by understanding diverse research trends and major findings in the field of global education and international educational cooperation.

KEDI has been playing an important role in development and innovation of Korean Education by presenting research-based policy alternatives in order to overcome the educational challenges. Striving to remain at the forefront of the global competition, KEDI is focusing on various educational research initiatives which range from education administration, teacher policies and higher education to educational statistics and educational quality assessment. In particular, since 2006, KEDI has produced several influential research on global education cooperation including education cooperation strategies with Asian, African, and Latin American countries. KEDI is also putting utmost efforts to develop international cooperative networks through various researches and programs. The Global Education Forum is one of such efforts.

I sincerely hope that you will join us in making KEDI Global Education Forum a meaningful success. I look forward to having your participation and sharing of your expertise that can make a real difference to the global educational cooperation in Korea.

Thank you.

■ Global Education Research Division

The Global Education Research Division has fulfilled its primary function of global educational research and suggested new strategies based upon its previous works on International education studies and education policies. Also, the Global Education Research Division has consistently placed great attention on international educational cooperation in order to share Republic of Korea's experience of educational development with global partner countries and build up networks and partnerships to strengthen international cooperation. In addition, it strives to establish a virtuous cycle of feedback mechanisms of the following sub-categories: educational statistics and data collection, development of indicators and indices, policy research, and international comparative studies and consultations. The Global Education Research Division puts greater efforts to enhance quality of the government's education policies towards "Education for Happiness."

■ Korean Educational Development Institute (KEDI)

Founded in August 1972, KEDI serves as a leading institution in educational policy research and planning, guiding the national agenda in formulating a unique education system contributing to Korea's dynamic growth. With a focus on strengthening educational frameworks, enhancing the quality of education, and fostering national talent, KEDI has successfully promoted national education development in an effort to create innovative systems crucial to Korea's future. Through consistent partnerships with various international organizations including UNESCO, the OECD, and the World Bank, KEDI proudly ranks among world-class research institutes of educational policy.
